

The piece I did was inspired by Maya Angelou's poem "Alone". I wanted to represent how everyone is alone in this world and need someone to face the world with them. The poem is mainly about how in this world you're mostly alone and can't really make it alone in the real world. I decided to just illustrate people who feel like they have no one to help them get through it and need someone beside them. The line in her poem, "Lying, thinking" got me inspired to draw people who just feel alone with no one around to comfort them.

Ana Bustillo Galicia

Stamford High School, 12th grade